Psychopathology of every-day life explains many of such forgetting and remembering's. Forgetting as an indication of everyday psychopathology may be divided into two clear-cut groups: 1. Forgetting to Carry Out Intended Purpose Slip of pen is another case of everyday Psychopathology which specially the educated mass meet more often than not. Many people continue to write the date of previous year in January. Not all such mistakes are due to the fixation of habit. Sometimes they signify the discrimination to accept the fact that they are becoming old. An old friend wrote a letter to a lady "I hope you are all well and unhappy," because of his dislike at the thought of her being happy with someone else.
